

Blog Terms and Conditions Policy

By commenting, you agree to the following:

While this blog is intended to encourage open dialogue, AmeriLux International reserves the right to publish comments or links that are considered promotional, irrelevant, negative or inappropriate at any time and for any or no reason at our sole discretion. If we do, we will make a reasonable effort to send a notice from us that says that “we thank you for your comment but we feel that its content is not appropriate at this time or is otherwise inconsistent with our rules”.

Please only post relevant and related links in your comments. No links to your personal blog (unless it’s related) and no spam links. Do not post information that you know to be confidential or sensitive or otherwise in breach of the law. Be courteous and use respectful language. We reserve the right to edit comments to eliminate profanity or personal attacks in otherwise valid comments.

Due to the changing nature of the daylighting and construction industries, the information contained in this blog may not be current. Laws, regulations, design practices and scientific discoveries are ever changing. Information, opinions, links and references are susceptible to human error or change. Therefore, the information in this blog shall not be considered legally binding, nor should it be used for final designs, code/regulatory submittals or any other specific design or business considerations. For design information consult official test results or technical manuals for current information.

To post a comment, you’ll see that we ask you to provide your name (or a username) and e-mail address. We request your name to make it easier to carry on a conversation. For this reason, we publish your name along with your comment. We ask for your e-mail address so that we can contact you if necessary. It is our policy not to publish your e-mail address. AmeriLux does not share personal information with third-parties nor do we store information about your visit to this blog.

AmeriLux is not responsible for the republishing of the content found on this blog on other Web sites or media without our permission. The content of this blog is opinion and not intended to defame or insult. If insulting, inaccurate, or inappropriate information is found within this blog, it should be brought to the attention of AmeriLux. The terms and conditions of this privacy policy are subject to change at any time and without notice. Those who violate these terms and conditions may be blocked from making further posts.

Thank you for taking the time to read this comments policy. We encourage your participation in our discussions and look forward to an active exchange of ideas.